Project summary

The project "Enhancing EU's role in consolidating local democratic resilience in Moldova and Serbia (DREMS)" aims to enhance the EU's role in the process of consolidating local democratic resilience in Moldova and Serbia by promoting a cognitive transfer of democratic resilience practices at the local level with the help of academia and civil society representatives. To this end, the project aims to produce 10 podcasts, 1 policy brief, 4 academic articles and a local democratic resilience toolkit based on the data collected during the research phases (focus groups with representatives from local public administration, academia, civil society and local media) that will take place in both countries. In addition, DREMS aims to increase academic knowledge about democracy in Eastern European countries by introducing 3 new courses at the Faculty of European Studies, Babeș-Bolyai University. Finally, DREMS awards 4 Civil society actors from Serbia and the Republic of Moldova. For the residential phase, the Civil society actors will be present in Cluj, where they will be offered a training programme and will be involved in an exchange of best practices with a local NGO. For the second phase of the training the Civil society actors will return to their home countries where they will organise 4 awareness-raising events on democratic resilience. Once established, the Centre will act as a focal point of academic expertise on democratisation and democratic resilience, working closely with civil society representatives from Eastern Europe and generating insights that will complement EU initiatives in this field.

Under WP4. The Civil society actors selection and democratic resilience tools, a training programme will take place. The activities of the project also propose the involvement in this approach of several experts from the civil society from Serbia and the Republic of Moldova who, due to the financial support, will be able to become acquainted with the ways that Romania has considered appropriate in its process of effective democratisation. Each Civil society actor will become an ambassador for democratisation and democratic resilience in their country of origin. Moreover, countries that are on the periphery of the EU (Serbia and the Republic of Moldova) have the chance to delve into European public diplomacy. The selection of the Civil society actors will be made according to the present methodology, so that the most active and involved members of civil society from the countries targeted by the project will be encouraged to participate in the competition.

This activity promotes and encourages dialogue between academia and civil society by providing a training program for civil society in Serbia and the Republic of Moldova and by transferring tools to improve democratic resilience in the beneficiaries' countries of origin.

The Civil society programme will be organised for 4 people, 2 from Serbia and 2 from Moldova. This activity will include the organisation of the selection process, the actual conduct of the programme and the implementation activities in the countries of origin. The selection will ensure horizontal principles of gender equality, equal opportunities, equal treatment, etc. For the implementation of the program, the project will target 2 persons from each country (Serbia and Moldova) for a period of 3 months. Each fellow will receive a monthly grant of 2,000 euro. Four civil society representatives from Moldova and Serbia will be involved in a training programme for 3 months. Out of the 3 months, 2 weeks will be spent at Babeș-Bolyai University in Cluj-Napoca, Romania, where they will participate in different activities aimed at ensuring an exchange of good practices with academics and civil society representatives from Romania. During the first part of their stay, they will participate in a training programme offered by a local NGO that has implemented a series of important projects in the field of democratisation, familiarise themselves with the created toolkit, be invited to give lectures to Romanian students and participate in the podcasts on democratic resilience. For the second part of the programme, the Civil society actors will return to their countries where they will hold several public lectures/awareness campaigns (to diverse audiences) that will help implement the toolkit in their communities. Their valuable input will help to develop a comprehensive list of recommendations that will be included in the policy brief to be published at the end of our project.

The results of WP 4 are: Organisation of a competition to award 4 civil society actors from Serbia and the Republic of Moldova; Organisation of a training programme; Launch of 10 podcasts on democratic resilience; Organisation of 4 awareness-raising events on democratic resilience, hosted by fellows, in the countries of origin. A competitive selection will be made based on the following criteria:

- The most active and committed members of civil society;
- Work in/cooperate with NGOs with effective activities at regional and/or national level;
